Focus on Bremen - view on the world

On paper 2006 is almost no more than a stop-over. Individual World Championships and Olympic Qualifications are scheduled for next year, yet 2006 still offers many highlights. At all events Butterfly stars can count on their chances for similar success as last year.

The sport-World not only looks on Germany for the soccer-WCC, but already in spring, when in Bremen the World Team Championships are held. China enters as defending champion at the Women's as well as at the Men's and has to be considered top-favourite in both competitions once again.

The fans of the host's teams hope for another medal at least at the Men's, where the team had surprisingly entered the final in Doha/Katar in 2004. Secretly the Germans wish for revenge for Doha due to the home-advantage – and of course in the final, if possible. Butterfly top-player Timo Boll still warns for extended expectations: „Of course we have a strong team, which can play anything, and the spectators are on our side. Still we have to survive the group stage and see from match to match. It's best to not even think about a final against China.“

After the seeding on the 15th of March on site in Bremen the participating teams know their opponents in the group. The WCC will be played in the old system with no double and not yet in the new system, which will premiere at the Olympic Team Competition in Beijing in 2008 with one double.

The preparations for the most important Table Tennis event of the year have been running intensely for weeks. The effort of the German Table Tennis Federation (DTTB), hoping for a boost for Table Tennis in the own country by the WCC, seems to pay out in advance.

„One might even talk about a WCC-fewer“, DTTB general secretary Matthias Vatheuer has stated in the German internet magazine „Tischtennis Inside“ at the beginning of the year.

Fears of a dominance of soccer and a negative effect for Bremen in public interest did not confirm due to Vatheuer: „Of course people talk a lot about the soccer-WCC. We do not want to face up with this. Yet the immense interest in soccer has not had any negative effect on us. In the fundamental sections of marketing, sales and supporters things go very well.“

Of course some Butterfly stars as well hope for a good outcome of the tournament in Bremen, where the World Veteran Championships start only a few days after the match-point has been played. Two years ago in Katar many Butterflies had been present on the pedestal: Kong Linghui and Zhang Yining each got Gold with their Chinese team, Boll led the German Silver team and the South Koreans Joo Se Hyuk and Oh Sang Eun as well as Aya Umemura returned home with a Bronze medal.

The World Team Championships in Bremen are without doubt the most important event in the young Table Tennis year. But 2006 offers even more exquisite and important events in the World's fastest rally sport. And the most important ones are held in Europe. Already in February the continental elite steps up at the Europe Top-12 in Copenhagen, and in October all continental Champions and the World's strongest players meet for the World Cup in Paris.

For the German Butterfly star Timo Boll both competitions have a special meaning. In Copenhagen the World Vice-Champion in the doubles has the chance to win this European Ranking tournament for the third time, which was only achieved by Sweden's Idol Jan-Ove Waldner and current European Champion Vladimir Samsonov (Belarus) in the 35 years of its history. The European Champion of 2002 is challenged by another Butterfly colleague: the Danish WCC-third Michael Maze wants to utilize his home-advantage to repeat his victory of 2004. In Paris Boll becomes the hunted one, after the lefthander had beaten China's three top-stars Wang Liqin, Ma Lin and Wang Hao in a row last year in Liège. By this he entered the list of winners of the most important tournament after the Olympic Games and the World Championships for the second time.

The Pro Tour as well is of great interest again. The „Grand Final“ at the end of the year in Hong-Kong is the only high-class tournament in the important Asian Table Tennis market in 2006 and again finds Timo Boll as defending champion. Up to then the top-stars of the scene fight for the necessary point for qualification at 16 stations, starting with the Slovenian Open in January. Compared to last year there are two tournaments more. New in the calendar are the Kuwait Open in February and the Serbian Open in autumn, which have their special thrill as a final test for the European Championships 2007 at the same location.

The TTV RE-BAU Gönnern e.V. announces the extension of the contract of its second German top player Jörg Roßkopf.

Treasurer Norbert Mai states: „This is the most pleasing news of the new year. Since 2000 he has been with us and he is as good as he was in his best times. He is anchor and foundation of the team, he's the backbone, when it's getting tight, he's the voice of the team. And with 10:9 he's the best German player in top positions after our own No. 1, Timo Boll. To bring it to a point: Jörg Roßkopf has signed a contract dated 02.01.2006 for two more years up to the 30.06.2008.“

By this he describes view and goals of the club and of Roßkopf very clearly. Jörg Roßkopf wants to work and live on highest level together with Helmut Hampl, head-coach of the club and Hessian coach, and with Timo Boll, Germany's and Gönnern's No. 1. It was this environment that helped him overcome his serious injury three years ago back to his form and shall help him to realize the sixth Olympic qualification for Beijing 2008.

Norbert Mai continues: „For us it was a question of honour, of personal thankfulness towards Jörg and of respect for his achievements in sports and his endurance, which made us make an offer acceptable for him. We are sure that we have connected the future of the TTV RE-BAU Gönnern with Jörg. We are proud that Germanys Mister Table Tennis has become the first essential part of team of the Olympic season.“

Maze: Denmark's Sportsman of the year

Michael Maze, top player of the Butterfly team Borussia Düsseldorf, was made sportsman of the year 2005 by a jury of 40. By winning the Bronze medal at the last Olympic Games in Athens Maze and Finn Tugwell had caused great enthusiasm in our neighbouring country.

After Maze had won the title of the European Team Championships and a Bronze medal at the last World Championships there was a great Table Tennis euphoria in Denmark. The 24-year old Maze is one of the most popular sportsman in the country due to his success and left behind professional biker Michael Rasmussen and motor sportsman Tom Kristensen at the election. Maze: „Since Athens the Danish are hot for Table Tennis. This even improved by the ECC-victory in the own country. For this I'm really glad about this award.“

Timo Boll „Player of the year as well“

The Table Tennis fans in Germany have elected Timo Boll (Gönnern) as „Player of the Year“. After winning the World Cup, the Grand Final of the Pro Tour for the second time, the Sport Bambi and rank three at the election of the „Sportsman of the Year“ the clear lead of Boll at this election (81,5 % compared to 79,7 % last year) was no surprise. Christian Süß (Düsseldorf), Bolls successful partner in the doubles at the WCC was runner up ahead of Torben Wosik (Frickenhausen).

Women: Elke Wosik ahead of Struse and Silbereisen

Current World's 28, Elke Wosik, improved from 13,5 % last year to 57,5 % of the votes. Nicole Struse (Kroppach) and last year's winner Kristin Silbereisen (Busenbach) followed on ranks two and three.

Anyone interested in Table Tennis in Germany was eligible to vote. There was no given circle of candidates. Votes were given for a man, a women and one junior player. As juniors all those male and female players were accounted for, who were allowed to start in the first half of 2005 in the Junior- or Cadet classes.

The results

Male player of the year

1. Timo Boll 81,5 percent
2. Christian Süß 10 percent
3. Torben Wosik 4 percent
4. Bastian Steger 2,4 percent
5. Jörg Roßkopf 1,2 percent

Female player of the year

1. Elke Wosik 57,9 percent
2. Nicole Struse 25,9 percent
3. Kristin Silbereisen 10,9 percent
4. Tanja Hain-Hofmann 1,2 percent
5. Jessica Göbel 0,8 percent

Junior player of the year

1. Dimitrij Ovtcharov 51,2 percent
2. Patrick Baum 26,7 percent
3. Amelie Solja 8,3 percent
4. Patrick Franziska 1,4 percent
4. Katharina Michajlova 1,4 percent

Once again No.1:
Timo Boll

In 1999 Mario Amizic became Butterfly Sports Director, after he had been on a successful hunt for titles with the German record champion Borussia Düsseldorf for twelve years becoming the World's most successful club coach. A year later the born Croatian was given the permission by Butterfly to face another task, on which other well known coaches before have failed: to discover young Japanese talents and bring them into the international elite. How Mario Amizic dealt with the task, which paths he went and how his top players do today, you will be told in this interview in two parts. His experiences and ideas can be transferred to other areas of Table Tennis.

Part I1

„I have greatest respect for my players“

The interview with Marion Amizic was recorded a week before the World Junior Championships, which were held from the 10th to the 17th of December in the Austrian City of Linz. The Japanese team became World Champion leaving behind China and Germany. All three players are of Mario Amizic's „Düsseldorf Model“: Jun Mizutani, Seya Kishikawa and Taku Takakiwa. Jun Mizutani furthermore reached the final of the boys, where he had to step back for German Patrick Baum in an outstanding match. And in the doubles as well Mizutani climbed the pedestal with partner Kishikawa as third. Now it's about consisting in the senior section. For Mario Amizic the goal for the Japanese team is the qualification for the Olympic Games in 2008.

Mr. Amizic, you named several reasons supporting the „Düsseldorf training-model“. Yet the model is not really new. In your times as head-coach of Borussia Düsseldorf you got the rough diamond Vladimir Samsonov to come from Belarus to Düsseldorf at the age of 14. And first he did not play in Borussia's first team, but was rather given to a second division team close to Düsseldorf to form him cautiously. It ended up with a world class player, who dominated Europe so far. Was the „Samsonov Model“ example for the Japanese solution?

One cannot compare this directly. I just looked for a way to find a perfect system of promotion for the Japanese talents. And I believed to have it in Düsseldorf. They did not have to leave Japan only to be out of the country. No, they needed completely new input. They needed much playing experience and had to train with men in spite of their young age from the beginning on. The goals are set high and I don't have the time to wait 10 or 20 years for the great success. This quick path is not easy. One needs much patience. And for the children this way was and is very hard. They had to suffer many defeats at the beginning, wept a lot and had to – one should never forget this – cope with a totally new situation of life here in Düsseldorf. They have sacrificed a lot. For this I have greatest respect. And I'm happy that they are playing good results in the meantime.

You talk about high goals. What are they, Mr. Amizic?

My goal is Beijing 2008. At the upcoming Olympic Games my children should participate. They won't win, but Beijing is the elite and to those they should belong.

You are the most successful club coach of the World and collected title after title with Borussia. Your special reputation bases on the fact that you have brought many young players to the top, like Zoran Primorac in your times as coach in Croatia, like Jörg Roßkopf, Steffen Fetzner or Vladimir Samsonov, which you have not discovered, but taken over at young age of 14 or 15 and then improved. What are the perspectives of your four Japanese talents – considering their age of 15, 16, 18 and 21, at which they should be about to improve a lot.

For this I'd like to go further off. I offer a service. It includes logistic, training, coaching, many talks about anything, that might interfere with the development of the play or in daily life. This is 50%, the other 50% have to be brought in by the players. The players have to think a lot about table tennis. They have to train rigorously, nourish healthy, sleep well, fight and much more. So if I talk about a player's prospects, these prospects finally depend on themselves. The logistics are set up. The player himself decides, how far he gets.

You always talk about Düsseldorf as your base. Aren't the players travelling a lot?

That's true. They travel much and have learned a great deal. The base is Düsseldorf, but they are in transit a lot. Them being here for three weeks in a row is very rare. Next year they are going to play three to four Junior ProTour- and ten to twelve Senior ProTour tournaments. To this national- and continental titles as well as World Championships add up. This is a heavy schedule.

Do the four now belong to the Japanese top?

They are the heart of the Japanese National Team, and therefore they are supposed to make it to Beijing amongst the best 16 teams of the World. This is the first step to bring Japanese Table Tennis back to the World's top. The real strong phase of my players will come after 2008. Now they are still too young. Success in Table Tennis does not depend on how good a player plays, but on human maturity. This maturity needs time. The players have this potential. If they don't win at the World Junior Championships in Linz (Remark of the editor: The interview was held a week before) the World does not stop turning. Our goals are the Olympic Games in 2008.

One player of the four is accounted as a special talent by experts – the sixteen year old Jun Mizutani. He's No.2 of the U18 World's Ranking List, fifth of the U21-World's Ranking List and No.82 at the men's. What's so special about him?

He's unusually talented. For him there is no limit, he has all options. He's only 16 years old and still a little boy. By this I mean that everything is still playing. He has an incredible anticipation. When he starts playing he always knows what will come back. He sees everything at the table. He has much feeling. He's definitely a „no-limit“ boy. He's a little „Vladi“. You cannot put him into a drawer. He needs air to breathe. I always say, outstanding people need outstanding methods.

Especially gifted players many times are accounted as rather less laborious.

This does not go for him, but he had to learn his lessons. Only with feeling, a radar-hand and little tricks one can't win against the men. One needs aggressiveness and power. For seven, eights months now he's on a very good way. He works hard physically. Basically he knows his path to get to the top, but still he's only 16. When he plays, people like watching him, everywhere in the World. Me, too. He plays a different Table Tennis.

How great is the interest in Japan in those four?

Very large, for Japan waits for success. The figures of members has risen in the Japanese Federation. And this surely has to do with the popularity of my children.

Besides your work as Sports Director for Butterfly you are in your fifth year as Japanese Talent Scout. Have you ever regretted this step?

I asked myself many times: „Why are you doing this?“ There were not only few difficult situations, especially at the beginning. But if I look at the sacrifices the players have to make to walk this path with me, I have the greatest respect. And when I look at where they are today, I would be very sad if I hadn't gone for it.

Thank you very much, Mr. Amizic, and much success for the future with your Japanese Table Tennis children.

Butterfly Scholarships - The succesful company supports the ITTF Junior Global Program

The cooperation between Tamasu Butterfly and the ITTF at the „ITTF/Butterfly Solidarity Scholarship“ now enters the second year. By this the house of Butterfly especially supports the junior work of the World federation. In each year of the agreement Tamasu Butterfly gives away five scholarships for young players in agreement with the ITTF. Each scholarship is worth about 9.000 US$. In 2005 as well talents were rewarded. The receptors of the Butterfly scholarships – this time six, for Shing Yoshua Jordan and Robbie Frank share one – were awarded on the final day of the World Junior Championships in Linz.

Kasumi Ishikawa (Japan)

Kasumi ISHIKAWA is twelve years old; left handed, she is a shakehands grip attacking player who topspins strongly from both backhand and forehand. In 2004 she won both the Under 12 and Under 13 Girls Singles titles at the Japanese National Junior Championships and is considered one of the most talented players in the ten to fifteen years age group.

Jung Young Sik (Korea)

JUNG Young Sik is thirteen years old from Korea. He is a right handed attacking player who displays excellent technique and superb balance; over the table he shows good control whilst when the opportunity arises from him to attack, he displays outstanding consistency. He impressed at the World Cadet Challenge in 2005. A vital member of the Asian team, he won bronze medals in both the Cadet Boys Team event and in the Cadet Boys Singles whilst in the Cadet Boys Doubles, partnering Kenta MATSUDAIRA of Japan, he clinched the gold medal.

Shing Yoshua Jordan (Vanuatu)

SHING Yoshua Jordan is twelve years old, a young man who is brimful of enthusiasm. He walks down the street in his home town of Port Vila shadowing his strokes! He is a right handed attacking player who also impressed at the World Cadet Challenge in 2005. Watching him play you can see the determination in his eyes, his ambition is to be the best table tennis player in Oceania and his positive attitude may well see him realise that dream. The ITTF Global Junior Programme is giving him the opportunity to play internationally and he could well be a member of the Oceania team at the World Cadet Challenge for the next three years!

Sofia Polcanova (Moldawien)

Sofia POLCANOVA is eleven years old and lives in Chisinau, the capital of Moldova. She won the Girls Singles title at the Euro Mini Cadet Championships in Schiltigheim, Strasbourg in August 2005 and impressed the coaches at the ETTU Eurokids Plus Training Camp in Krakow, Poland in November 2005. Moldova is regarded as the poorest nation in Europe and opportunities for such players as Sofia POLCANOVA to achieve sporting excellence are thus limited; therefore, in addition to the scholarship Sofia POLCANOVA will receive an equipment package.

Olena Sowers (USA)

Olena SOWERS is fourteen years old and has made great progress throughout 2005. She is a player who possesses an admirable technique and has a strong topspin attacking game. She represented the North American team who finished in fifth place in the World Cadet Challenge in Santo Domingo in 2005 and is eligible to compete in the event in 2006.

Robbie Frank (Australien)

Robbie FRANK is undoubtedly one of the most improved players on the ITTF Global Junior Programme in 2005. In 2004 when he played in the World Junior Championships in Kobe, Japan he was just pleased to be there; it was his first major international tournament and no doubt he'll always remember playing MA Long in the team event. However, at the World Cadet Challenge in the autumn of 2005 he was there to compete and gave a series of fine performances, in the team event he lost only one match in straight games and recorded several very creditable victories. In the Cadet Boys Singles he finished in eighteenth place.

Tackiness Chop / Drive

You love control and rotation? How about Tackiness C or D? For years both types belong to the most prominent rubbers in the allround- and defence-section. This has a reason: For the extremely tacky and elastic surface provides excellent backspin. Well dosed topspin attacks and precise blocks continuously cause problems for your opponents. The Tackiness D offers more speed and more pressure compared to the Tackiness C, which is better in control and rotation. Players with a rather passive backhand working with push and chop often rely on the Tackiness C. World class defender Koji Matsushita likes to play with the rubbers of the Tackiness program. Let your opponents rotate!

Tackifire Special

Keen on China-spin? Tackifire Special – a lot of power plus super spin!

In 1999 we presented the new TACKIFIRE SPECIAL. Kong Linghui has helped us developing it. That it is going to be the rubber of the Olympic Champion 2000 we could not know at this time. Tackifire SPECIAL is an unusual rubber, joining Chinese know-how brought in by Chinese superstar Kong Linghui with our highest development technology and best production standards. The extremely tacky surface in combination with slightly harder sponge gives an incredible spin and speed to the ball – and this with highest precision in placing. Simply ideal for players with short stroke movements and a distinct use of the wrist.
